If the dentists at smiles4children have their way, all clichés about the discomforts associated with dentistry will be put to rest permanently. For children who visit the practice, says Dr. Edward Ginsberg, "going to the dentist is a happy experience. Most of them don't want to leave."

The offices at the Catonsville and Ellicott City locations are filled with such kid-friendly features as video arcades, movies, and play areas. But what makes parents happy is the dentists' expertise and care and their state-of-the-art approach to pediatric dentistry. smiles4children recommends that children visit the dentist by their first birthday. The doctors are committed to establishing partnerships with parents that will ensure optimal dental health for their children.

The five doctors in the practice understand all stages of a child's oral and psychological development, and have become known for work that includes in-office preventive and restorative dentistry, conscious sedation techniques, and treatment under general anesthesia in a hospital setting.

The members of the practice are all credentialed at local hospitals, and belong to several professional organizations including the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry, the American Dental Association, Maryland Academy of Pediatric Dentistry, and the Maryland State Dental Association.

Dr. Ginsberg, who founded smiles4children in 1984, believes that a successful practice is one where children feel at home and is a starting point on the journey through a lifetime of good oral health. "The dental needs of young children are very specific, and children have emotional needs as well," says Dr. Ginsberg. "Our practice has the experience and compassion to attend to both."
